

Homes for Fathers and Families ("HOFF") is a project aimed at providing the same degree of support for single fathers as is available for single mothers in the UK.

Fathers who look after their children on their own have much the same difficulties as mothers. In addition they are not necessarily as naturally gifted when it comes to caring for their children, nor are they seen as needing help, for example by employers in regard to time off or flexibility in working hours. As a result, in many cases, their children suffer.
